The Emotionally Resilient Teacher Because It's Tough Out There

Everything every teacher and school leader needs to move themselves and others from 'coping' to 'excelling' in trying times

It's not so much the events you experience but your experience of the events that decides whether you sink or swim.

The difference between those who cope, those who thrive and those who drown has nothing to do with what is happening and everything to do with how we respond. Get that response right and everything changes. This important one-day event will equip you with the tools you need to guarantee that response is a positive one. It will ensure you deal with whatever comes your way with confidence, resilience, equilibrium, positivity, optimism and more than a little good humour.

Focus: Leadership, well-being and behaviour. All phases

In so many ways, the quality of a school comes down to the quality of its relationships. But healthy, positive relationships need healthy, positive minds – something we can lose sight of in our current educational climate. Through his expertise in human behaviour, in communication, in relationships and in coaching, Andy has helped thousands of teachers and school leaders get more from themselves, from each other and, ultimately, from the children in their care.
