How teachers can identify and meet the needs of our most able children through a range of practical strategies.

Stretching our more able children is not something schools should do because Ofsted expects it but because, in doing so, everyone benefits. This new day-course by the venerable Dr George is all about getting the best out of gifted and talented children, whatever your classroom and whatever their background.

Helping these learners move from 'Young, Gifted and Bored' to well rounded, well educated and happy, Dr George covers important topics including a rationale for their education, useful identification strategies, the need of challenge, the role of parents, addressing underachievement, whole-school benefits and the importance of self-esteem in a culture of achievement.

Audience: SMT, GATCOs, classroom teachers and LSAs. Suitable for all key stage
