Primary Mathematics for Primary Teachers Scared of Primary Mathematics

How to overcome your fear of maths to deliver lessons that make maths sparkle

In this practical and hands-on course, primary maths specialist Nick Tiley-Nunn will share with you his proven and winning formula for outstanding primary mathematics. You will leave the course fully enthused and ready to transform mathematics in your school from bland to brilliant - and beyond. Without bogging you down in policy, Nick will share many, many practical, workable take-away strategies and activities with which to WOW your pupils the very next day. From 'Skittle Sharks' to 'The Functionator 3000', you will leave being able to not only bring smiles to your maths lessons but also mathematical thinking of the highest calibre.

Focus: Teachers and leaders, SENCOS. Suitable for key stages 1 and 2

Nick Tiley-Nunn is deputy head at a primary school in Suffolk, having previously been assistant head and SENCO at a school in London. He has been described as "A nationally significant talent at Maths teaching" by award-winning teacher and author Phil Beadle and Ofsted described his teaching as 'inspirational'. His first book How to Teach Primary Maths - anyone can feed sweets to sharks is due to be published by the Independent Thinking Press later this year.
