The TA as a Learning Coach Training Your Pupils to be Resilient Learners

The complete guide to making the most of teaching assistants in order to bring the best out of all learners

A well-trained, carefully employed teaching assistant can mean all the difference between success and failure in the classroom for many learners. A poorly trained, badly employed one is simply an unqualified person sitting with a failing learner who, quite frankly, deserves better.

Based on Jackie's unique experience as a teaching assistant, teacher, AST, school leader and as an internationally-acclaimed educational consultant and prolific author, this day-course will share practical strategies for teachers and teaching assistants to bring the best out of each other. Areas covered will include learning skills, questioning, motivation for reluctant learners, building resilience, coaching and communication skills.

Focus: Leadership, teaching and learning, engagement, behaviour. All phases
